Exeter City

Exeter City Women traces its origins back to the late 1990s, when the team was originally formed as Elmore Eagles L.F.C. in 1997. This early squad quickly found success, winning a league and cup treble in their first season, which established a foundation for a steady ascent through the women's football pyramid. The team officially joined forces with the men's club, Exeter City, in 2001, adopting the name Exeter City Ladies Football Club. This partnership allowed the team to continue its growth, which included winning the South West Women's Premier Division and gaining promotion to the South West Combination Women's League.

The club embraced its current identity as Exeter City Women at the end of the 2018-19 season in preparation for their campaign in the FA Women's National League. A period of sustained excellence followed, culminating in a historic 2023-24 season. The team went unbeaten in the league and were crowned Champions of the FA Women's National League Division One South West, securing promotion to the third tier of English women's football for the first time in the club's history. This success cemented the team's position as a driving force for women's football in the South West.
