AFC Wimbledon

AFC Wimbledon Women has a history that is intrinsically linked with the supporters' movement that founded the men's club. The women's team was founded in 2003, following the decision by the ladies' team of the original Wimbledon F.C. to transfer to the newly formed AFC Wimbledon after the men's team was relocated. This move established the women's team as a core part of the fan-owned, community-focused club. As an independent entity from 2003 to 2006, the club was a rarity in the women's top flight, but it has since thrived as a part of AFC Wimbledon.

Since its formation, the club has experienced a period of growth and success. In 2016, the team won their league title without a single loss and gained promotion to the FA Women's National League Division One South East. The club has also made history by playing competitive matches at the main Plough Lane Stadium. In the 2023-24 season, the team was confirmed as champions of their division, securing a promotion to the Premier Division South, marking a significant milestone in their journey up the football pyramid.
