Plymouth Argyle

Plymouth Argyle Women's football club was established in 1975, originally forming as the Plymouth Pilgrims following a local five-a-side competition. The team enjoyed significant early success on the national stage, reaching the quarter-finals of the FA Cup in both 1976 and 1977. After a period competing as the Saltash Pilgrims to reflect their home ground at the time, the club officially came under the umbrella of the professional men's side in 2001, rebranding as Plymouth Argyle Ladies. This transition marked the beginning of a more formalised structure that helped the team climb through the regional leagues to reach the national divisions.

The club entered a transformative period in 2021 when it was rebranded as Plymouth Argyle Women and moved under the management of the Argyle Community Trust. A major milestone was reached in July 2024, when the team was fully integrated into the main professional football club. This integration brought increased financial backing and professional resources, including a move to play regular home matches at Home Park. Recent seasons have seen the team competing in the third tier of English football, with a renewed focus on youth development and a long-term plan to establish themselves at a new permanent home within the city.
