Chatham Town

Chatham Town Women's football club has a history that is rooted in its re-establishment as an independent entity in 2020. The club, which had previously been operated by Gillingham F.C., re-formed under its own management after the men's club announced it would no longer run the women's team. This period marked a crucial step towards the club's current identity, allowing it to lay the groundwork for a new, sustainable future.

A significant turning point came in October 2022 when Kevin Hake, the chairman of Chatham Town, became the owner-chairman of the women's team. This move led to the club's official rebrand as Chatham Town Women for the 2023-24 season, a change approved by the FA. The team also relocated to Chatham's Bauvill Stadium, securing a stable home ground. This new partnership has allowed the club to create a direct pathway for young female players through a new girls' academy and has firmly established Chatham Town Women as a key part of the local football community.
